Because of the proliferation of more advanced applications within the higher education environment, especially those involving imagery and video streaming, it is important that sufficient unlicensed spectrum be available to enable performance targets to be met in the manner expected by students, faculty, and staff